

Adaptation Notes

A quarterly update from

EcoAdapt™

Winter 2017, Issue 17

EcoAdapt #Insists that we will #Assist in efforts to #Resist so Adaptation can #Persist

Our valentine to the adaptation community is not just a commitment of our love for adaptation, but a commitment to keep access to climate information flowing to you. We pledge to continue sending you updates on where to find the resources you need, posting new tools and State of Adaptation Knowledge Exchange, getting more people to the National Adaptation Forum with enticing content and travel support, hosting webinars to discuss the major issues of adaptation today, and partnering with you on Awareness to Action projects to get the information you need to meet the needs you have.

Please join us in continuing to make adaptation action part of good practice.

#INSIST #ASSIST #RESIST #PERSIST!

Belated Valentine for CAKE? #INSIST #ASSIST #RESIST #PERSIST

The Climate Adaptation Knowledge Exchange \(CAKE\) has shown its unconditional love for climate science and adaptation resources every day since it launched in 2010. But since January, CAKE has upped its outpouring of love to include serving as a sanctuary for any politically threatened adaptation resources. If you'd like to help make this happen, please make a donation today!

Webinars abound

Wondering what the new administration means for adaptation? Us too!

Tune in to a National Adaptation Forum Webinar on April 26, 2017 - 100 Days of the New Administration. During this webinar, people in the know share what they have seen and what they think might happen next. We'll also share some ideas about how to make sure adaptation thrives in the face of change.

Can't wait until April? Join us for another National Adaptation Forum Webinar on March 1, 2017 - Rolling Up Our Sleeves Together: Building an Inclusive and Impactful Adaptation Movement. Join a conversation among social justice practitioners and adaptation leaders to explore the adaptation future, including how to take advantage of the National Adaptation Forum to advance the climate adaptation movement.

Do you know... not only is EcoAdapt a 501(c)3 so your donation is tax deductible, but also you get an artisan BOB card if you make a donation to EcoAdapt?

Programmatic Updates

A snapshot of the fantastic work afoot at EcoAdapt!

National Adaptation Forum

Start your countdown timers! 82 days to the Forum!

We look forward to seeing you in Saint Paul, MN in less than three months. In the next few days the Program Committee will be letting you know about your proposals, travel support recipients will begin being notified, and plenary sessions will be organized. That just leaves a few things on your to do list: get your travel arrangements made (applications for travel support are still open!), book your hotel room, register for the Forum (early bird registration rates are ending soon!), and start working on your presentations. Begin an adaptation conversation before the Forum on social media using #NAF2017, and stay tuned to the Forum website (or join the mailing list) for updates.

Climate Adaptation Knowledge Exchange (CAKE)

Safeguarding adaptation resources

The CAKE community is hard at work preserving vital adaptation resources provided by our federal and state partners. This includes guidance, reports, datasets, and tools. But we need your help! Here are a few ways you can #assist in safeguarding these resources and help build the CAKE database. First, add content! You can add critical adaptation resources to CAKE by uploading them yourself (once you sign in), or emailing your favorite five resources directly to the CAKE team. Second, share this preservation effort with friends and colleagues via social media by clicking on the tweet below! Lastly, consider supporting CAKE with a donation (yep, we asked you to do this above so it must be important).

Help CAKE continue to help you!

Worried about future access to #climate science? What are the top #adaptation resources you rely on? Share your favorites: info@cakex.org!

Awareness to Action

New adaptation resources available for Southern California

EcoAdapt is happy to announce a variety of adaptation resources specific to Southern California are now available! Wondering how habitats in this region may be affected by climate change? Take a look at the 12 habitat-specific vulnerability assessments. Ready to tackle adaptation? Check out the habitat adaptation strategy summaries to explore adaptation options and learn ways to prioritize actions for implementation. Additionally, browse the adaptation implementation plans and case studies for examples of how to integrate vulnerability and adaptation information into regional management activities and projects! Stay tuned for a spring webinar presenting the project and final products!

State of Adaptation

Check out CATFish: The Climate Adaptation Toolkit for Fisheries Management

We spent last year surveying climate savvy marine fisheries managers, and you may recall the report, The State of Climate Adaptation in U.S. Marine Fisheries Management, which summarized our findings. We are thrilled to announce that we are continuing our effort to get climate adaptation resources to fisheries managers with the launch of CATFish: The Climate Adaptation Toolkit for Fisheries Management. This resource is a special content dashboard of the Climate Adaptation Knowledge Exchange and its already expanded its content since launch, adding some details for freshwater fisheries as well. Swim on over and give it a look for all your fisheries management needs.
